

IQ vs EQ vs SQ

What Makes a Great Leader?

© Eric Partaker

What it is:	How well you learn, understand, and use information.	Your ability to recognize, understand, and manage emotions.	How well you navigate social situations and manage relationships.
Why it matters:	Essential for making strategic decisions, solving problems, and innovating in business.	Key to managing teams effectively, building personal resilience, and leading with empathy.	Crucial for building strong relationships, networking, and collaborating well.
Examples:	Analyzing market trends to guide a company's strategic direction. Creating innovative solutions to complex business challenges.	Resolving team conflicts by understanding different perspectives. Motivating employees through challenging times by showing empathy.	Building lasting partnerships through effective networking. Facilitating smooth team collaborations by understanding group dynamics.

If you found this helpful, follow me for more

Eric Partaker

